CC Members Vote Change in By-Laws

At the board of director's meeting of the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night, the vice-president, Jackson Ammons, who presided in the absence of the president, V. J. Dorman, announced that three changes in the By-Laws had been approved by written consent of a majority of the members and, therefore, were automatically adopted.

A copy of the amended By-Laws have been posted on the bulletin board in the chamber office for the convenience of members. Two amendments concerned sections covering number and qualifications of directors, and vacancies on the board of directors. An addition to Article III was approved as follows: "Upon expiration of the term for which he is elected, no person shall be eligible for election or appointment as Director until one year shall have elapsed from the expiration of said term."

It was announced that three members have been added to the Membership Committee: E. J. Chaffee of the Dutch Cleaners, Al Huebsch of the Grove Quality Cleaners and Wm Parsons of the Lemon Grove Realty Company.

A letter was read from the San Diego County Fair at Del Mar, stating that Sunday, July 9, has been assigned as Lemon Grove Day. Residents are asked to note the date and to plan their visit to the Fair to coincide with this special time.

La Mesa Fire Truck Here Last Saturday

E. T. Robeson, of the La Mesa City fire department, brought a La Mesa truck to Lemon Grove Saturday afternoon for exhibition purposes.

A San Diego truck was scheduled to be here, but as some of the San Diego trucks were in the repair shop, Chief Courier could not spare a vehicle for the Lemon Grove exhibition.

Capt. Robeson explained the workings of the truck to visitors to the Shopping Center parking lot.

Chief Lyles of the La Mesa department dropped over for a time to see how things were going.

The La Mesa trucks have just been equipped with two-way radios and the department was trying them out during the afternoon.

Music was furnished by the Galland Radio and Television Shop.

A. J. Leone, member of the Advisory Board to the Fire Commissioners, had charge of the affair.

Quartet Sings(?) at Kiwanis

A quartet has been organized at the Kiwanis Club, consisting of Doc Braxton, Parson Mulkey, Druggist Lindley and Station Master Hall.

The boys rendered a very touching ballad Monday noon, behind the curtain in the stage at the Rancho Mission auditorium where the club meets. The only complaint heard was by Lindley who said the record cost him $3.50 and nobody offered to take up a collection to recompense him for the expense.

The quartet might have gotten away with their little trick if Al Ross hadn't rolled back the curtain while they were singing (?)

Rev. Mulkey gave a talk on the state of the program of the day.

Winn Ward, of El Centro, Lt. Governor of District 11, dropped in for a surprise visit.

DATES CLAIMED

April 8—Western dance, Post 2082, at VFW Hall, Imperial at Lincoln.

April 10—Dedication of VFW Hall, Installation of Post and Auxiliary officers, 7:30 p. m.

May 19—School Election.

June 6—Special Fire Protection District Election, in conjunction with Primary Election.

Hi. Neighbor

by Mae Rex Graham

This week, as the copy came to my desk from the various local churches telling of the special Easter services, I am thinking of the folks who have moved here recently or in the past few months. Perhaps with all of the many extra duties of getting settled, they haven't got around to finding a church home. Perhaps no one has thought to stop by and invite them to church. That lack of neighborliness hasn't been intentional. It is just because everyone is so busy trying to make a living and serving on this or that committee that they haven't realized that there may be lonely folks in town.

To you newcomers—The Review, today, has Easter greetings and an invitation from every church in the community to attend the church of your choice on Holy Thursday, Good Friday and Easter Sunday. You will be made welcome wherever you go.

And while you good neighbors are being thankful for all of the rich promises that the first Easter gave, don't forget the shut-ins and the sick. Just to know that some one cares, may mean the turning toward recovery.

"I was a stranger, and you took me in."

What words of sorrow and blind chagrin!

This simple eulogy commands! What heartfelt thanks from grateful hands!

"I was a stranger, and you took me in."

A commendation like this would win.

A peace from tell, and bleak despair Would sink in an exalted air.

"I was a stranger, and you took me in."

The wind blows tattered garments thin;

But who parts his loaf with me?

Feeds more than two—his guests are three.

—Mary Lucretia Barker in Signs of the Times.

Sawyer Observes First Anniversary

It was a year ago Tuesday that T. B. Sawyer came to Lemon Grove and took over the Sexton Pharmacy at Broadway and Imperial.

He immediately changed the name to Sawyer's Lemon Grove Pharmacy and enlarged the staff of clerks.

Mr. Sawyer was a pharmacist in Los Angeles for 20 years prior to locating in San Jacinto six years before coming here.

He decided upon this location because he believed it to be a town with a future, for at that time it was the fastest growing town in San Diego County.

The store employs two registered pharmacists, Wm. Chaffin and Harold Slader, in addition to the proprietor, two clerks, Jean Gregory and Dorothy Wagner, and four girls at the fountain lunch. They are Ethel Burton, Hazel Eskin, Frances Weston and Bernadette Winters.

Mr. Sawyer has enjoyed a good business since he has been in Lemon Grove, and to show his appreciation to the people of the community, he is holding a first anniversary sale this week, with oodles of bargains for them to take home.

He invites the people of the community to drop in and say hello.

Mr. Sawyer and his courteous clerks will be pleased to meet everyone and to give them their attention.

Read Mr. Sawyer's ad on page 8 of today's Review and then take advantage of the bargains.

DOWNEY STEPS DOWN

Senator Sheridan Downey has decided not to be a candidate for re-election and is swinging his support to Publisher Manchester Boddy of the Los Angeles Daily News. His health makes a strenuous campaign on the part of the Senator an impossibility; and it would be just that with Congressman Richard Nixon as his Republican opponent. Nixon is a fighter and always has plenty of ammunition at his side before undertaking any kind of fight. Now it is problematical whether Helen Gahagan or Boddy will get the Democratic nomination, but it will make no difference either way. Nixon will be the next United States Senator, or we miss our guess. One thing about Boddy is his inconsistency. He is a typical New Dealer, and consistent inconsistency is one of the attributes of a New Dealer. Boddy has been all things to all men, and he grasps every new idea that comes along in the hopes that he can find some one thing that would make his Daily News popular with Los Angeles county people. He supported Upton Sinclair's Utopia and all the same that sprang up in California during the 30's, everything but the free enterprise system. If he goes to the Senate we may still count on his inconsistency. We will never know where he stands, or how long he will stay on any given issue.

SOCIALISM IS NEVER CHEAP

Cheep government electric power is a myth—and a deliberately contrived myth which is being used in the long-established effort to socialize all the power producing and distribution facilities of the United States.

The reasons why cheap power is a myth are many. And one of the most important is the tax factor. The government power systems, in addition to being tax-subsidized, are wholly or largely tax free. The private utilities, by contrast, are one of the biggest taxpayers in the country, to city, county, state and Federal government.

One of the leading West Coast utility companies provides an excellent specific example. Last year, this company paid more than $40,000,000 in Federal, state and local taxes. That is an average of $110,351 every day the year—and $4,598 for every hour of the day.

What this means to local government is especially impressive. In California, the state in which the utility operates, there are 58 counties. The company pays taxes in 48 of them. In four counties its tax is over 50 percent of the total—in other words, it pays more than all other taxpayers combined. And in several other counties it pays between 25 and 50 percent of the total.

It doesn't take an economist to figure out what would happen to the taxpayers in every state if the government, instead of private enterprise, were supplying electric service. Taxes would go up all along the line—often by huge percentages. And the alleged "saving" in the electric bill would be offset many times over by the jump in the tax bill.

Socialism is never cheap. You pay for it through the nose in one way or another.

GRASS BECOMES HUMAN FOOD

Something like one-half of the total land area of the nation—nearly one billion acres—is in range land and pasture. Most of this would be almost entirely unproductive if it were not for live stock growing. The meat animals consume the grass which the range lands produce, and so, through the alchemy of nature, this otherwise useless grass becomes steaks and chops and roasts and the rest of the meat we buy.

Here is a particularly striking example of the livestock industry's contribution to the country. And, in addition, the animals consume approximately 85 percent of all our grain crops. Millions of tons of by-products, such as sugar-beet pulp and oil-seed cake, go to them.

The point is that livestock growing helps the whole nation by converting products that would otherwise go to waste, into food for people, by restoration of the soil and in various other ways. Finally, when meat animals are processed in the packing houses, they provide a long list of valuable by-products, made of horns and hoofs and hair and other edible commodities, in addition to meat.

Looking at the matter from the viewpoint of farmer and rancher, meat animals constitute agriculture's largest single source of income. The market is always there, day in and day out, ready to pay the going price. The live-stock benefits everyone.

FREE ENTERPRISE IN ACTION

In recent review of last year's corporate earnings issued by the National City Bank of New York, this factual observation is made:

"Total volume of retail and wholesale trade was only slightly below the record level of 1948, but profit margins of most chain department and specialty stores, as well as wholesalers, were squeezed by high operating costs . . ."

That simply means that the stores haven't found it possible to make revenue keep pace with expenses. And the obvious question is, why can't a merchant simply raise his selling prices to take care of any change in his costs?

The point is that that is easier said than done. And one of the main reasons why that should be true is the competitive situation. Retailing is about as perfect an example of the workings of free economy as can be imagined. The stores—big ones and little ones—chain-owned and individually-owned—are in constant competition for business. The stores—big ones and little ones—chain-owned and individually-owned—are in constant competition for business.

The consumer, in the mass, decides whether any store shall succeed or wind up under the sheriff's hammer. He can take his trade wherever he pleases. So the inevitable result is that every merchant tries to sell a little cheaper, to make his advertising and displays a little more compelling, or to do something else that will win him consumer favor and patronage.

Under these conditions, several things happen. Profits are bound to be extremely modest—competition sees to that. Service is bound to be good—competition sees to that too, and misrepresentation and shady practices are at an absolute minimum—once more, competition does the trick.

The retailers you patronize are living examples of free enterprise in action.

But he may pay even more in the years to come.

Roadbuilders who met in a national convention recently in Cincinnati estimated that two billion dollars will be spent this year on new road building. Nearly a billion and a half will be spent patching and maintaining old roads. And though those figures are double the amount spent in pre-war years, they fall far short of the need.

OWLS

The Long-eared Owl (Asio Willsoni) is found throughout the United States and is one of our most beneficial birds of this character. It hunts its prey at night and being a great eater it gorges itself whenever possible. Unless the victim caught is too large, it is swallowed whole. The Owl has a strong sharp, hooked beak and stout curved claws, and is able to catch mice, gophers, moles, rabbits and chip munks. On account of a few bad characters in the family of Hawks and Owls, any bird bearing the name is condemned without trial.

The Owl remains in one place the year round, and raises one brood a year. The young birds grow slowly and require an exceedingly large amount of food, hence the rearing of a family of owlets twice as great a responsibility as that of any other bird. One peculiarity about the Owl is that its eyes are set firmly in their sockets, and the bird is required to turn its head in order to see in any direction. The eyes appear unusually large on account of the feathered disks around them. The Owl is not wary, hence is one of the greatest sufferers where bounties are paid for the destruction of birds of prey.

The Owl is supposed to marry for life. They lay from three to six eggs. They love the oak covered foothills of the back country, and the willow lined stream beds. It usually nests in live oak trees and evergreens, and the mottled white and dusky brown plumage with two pair of horns readily identify the birds. Their call note is rather a meow, called softly and silently. The call of the Long-eared is a fascinating study. The hoot is not definite, but resolves itself into a tender, more secluded note. This same note the male uses to comfort his mate, to scold the little Owls, and generally.

Schreech Owl (Otus Asio). In the South, the little screech Owl

FARM NEWS

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

CARE OF YOUNG AVOCADO TREES

Following are some pointers given to growers at the recent San Diego County Avocado Institute by Arnold White, Farm Advisor, Santa Barbara County.

Don't accept, even as gifts, inferior stock. Plant No. 1 trees from a reliable nurseryman.

Irrigation is most important. One common fault is too large a basin, wetting the soil around the ball, but often not thoroughly wetting the boled soil. A cone-shaped, small basin was suggested for early irrigations.

Protection from sunburn, and certain rodents by a loose wrapping was suggested. Also gophers can and frequently do kill very young trees.

Extremely light application of nitrogen fertilizers several times during the first year.

LOOK FOR TENT CATERPILLARS

March and April find the tent caterpillars are on the move in many almond and deciduous orchards. Where trees have put on leaves, the pest may have built tent-like webs and started the foliage, states Farm Advisor Bernarr J. Hall.

Such heavy eaters are these caterpillars that they can strip a tree of foliage in a few hours. Veteran growers check their trees daily this time of year, and if they find the pests they move on them without delay.

A standard weapon is spraying with basic lead arsenate, 3 to 4 pounds per 100 gallons of water, plus a spreader used according to directions of the manufacturer. If the grower can locate but a few of the colonies of caterpillars, he can destroy them by burning them on the tree with a torch or by cutting infested branches and burning them.

Further details on control can be obtained at the Extension Service Office in Room 404, U.S. Customs Building, San Diego.

CROP ADJUSTMENT

Marked changes will take place in acreage of field crops this year, reports Farm Advisor E. C. Moore, University of California Agricultural Extension Service.

Moore says acreage of rice, flaxseed, beans and late potatoes will be down. High record acreages will be produced in barley, oats, sugar beets and irrigated pastures. Alfalfa acreage will reach an all-time record. These acreage adjustments have been brought about largely by government programs.

Estimates are based on intentions of growers reported to the California Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Growers will produce alfalfa from 1,058,000 acres this year.

Look for THE GLASS MASK

This is the all-time record and 10 percent above last year. Most of the increase is in cotton counties.

Growers will plant 2,187,000 acres of barley this year, five percent more than last year. Most of the increase will come from places where dry weather reduced barley plantings last year and from counties where cotton acreage will be reduced this year. Sugar beets will cover 219,000 acres, and this is 46 percent more than last year.

Plantings of oats will be up 10 percent over last year.

Flaxseed acreage will be the smallest planted since 1940, an estimated 69,000 acres. This is 65 percent less than one year ago. The large drop in acreage is due to unfavorable price outlook at planting time.

Bean plantings will be down 16 percent from last year, a total of 305,000 acres to be planted will be the lowest acreage since 1946.

CALIFORNIA DAIRIES LEAD

California's progressive dairymen led the nation again this year, Farm Advisor Fred Dorman reported. Also, they added new laurels. The Farm Advisor has received reports from the United States Department of Agriculture that show:

California has a higher average production for all cows than in any other state.

Although California is 11th in number of cows in the nation, we are fourth in cash farm income from milk and fifth in total milk production.

The high production of California's cows is directly attributable to the dairy herd improvement program initiated by the College of Agriculture in 1909. Dorman said, Average butterfat production of California's dairy cows has increased over 100 pounds since that time. Production testing through these associations of dairymen provided the means by which they could improve their feeding and select for better process of California's Dairy Herd Improvement Associations is shown in the results:

The highest number of cows under standard test of any state for the 22nd consecutive year.

A higher average production for all cows in Dairy Herd Improvement Associations than any state.

The dairy herd improvement program in California has been directed by G. E. Gordon, Extension Dairy Specialist of the College of Agriculture. In San Diego County this program has been in continuous operation for almost 30 years. At the present time, Dorman is the local representative of the College in the direction of the D.H.I.A.

PATTERED TO FIT

Use the measurements of your best fitting dress, suggests Home Advisor Marguerite Wurtsbaugh, Extension Service.

Try on a dress that is comfortable and fits well. Notice where it could be improved and use pin lines, to indicate any changes. Remove the dress and measure from seam to seam. Measure the pattern from seam to seam and correct the pattern to correspond to the measurements of the dress.

Some parts of a pattern are easy to adjust. Mrs. Wurtsbaugh says. Lengthen or shorten a skirt at the bottom. If the bodice is gathered into the waistline, lengthen or shorten the pattern at the waistline. However, if the bodice is snugfitting or has a lowered waistline, follow the pattern directions. Mrs. Wurtsbaugh does not recommend increasing or decreasing the size of the pattern down the center front or center back line of the bodice because of the change it will make in the neckline. Follow directions for the sleeves too, so the elbow darts will be in the right place.

Remember that a quarter inch in the front and back of a pattern at the bustline, waistline, or hip-line will increase the width of the whole garment one inch. An eighth of an inch tuck in the front and back of the pattern at the seams will decrease the width of the garment one inch.

Lemon Grove School News

News of Teachers Association

The Lemon Grove District Teachers' Association met at the school cafeteria last Thursday evening with William Vick, president of the association, presiding.

The following officers for the 1950-51 school year were elected: Mrs. Hazel Schwalm, president; Mrs. Grace Burks, vice-president; Mrs. Evelyn Lauritzen, recording secretary; Mrs. Dorothy Kennedy, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ellen Berdel, treasurer; Mrs. Virginia Cornelius, Salary and Evaluation Committee member; Mrs. Marie Adams, parliamentarian; Mrs. Helen Thompson, Professional Relations Committee member. The new officers and committee members will take office at the May meeting.

Members of the nominating committee were Mr. Butler, Mrs. Tait, Mrs. Fielder and Mrs. Smith, all teachers in the district and representatives of the four school units.

The dramatics class, an elective group under the direction of Harry Butler, presented the program for the Junior High assembly on Friday.

Janice Yeargin and Arlene Kenworthy announced the numbers which entertained over 250 students. The first play, "Hospitality House," featured Carol Covert, Mona McIntosh, Norma Frye, Frances Whiting and Theresa Martin.

Beverly Roper and Ava Winkler then sang "Dear Hearts and Gentle People," and Carol Denstedt sang "I Can't Say No."

"We Want Mother" was presented by Yvonne Boucher, Emma Lou Henderson, Mary Ricvic and Gloria Herr. This humorous sketch demonstrated how necessary mother is to all members of the household and the turmoil which arises when she is suddenly called away.

Rosemary Blalock then gave a humorous reading, "The Cross Lady."

"The Switch," a clever skit using names of students in the junior high, featured Ava Winkler, Dolores Kendrick, Marlene Dawson, Beverly Roper and Arlene Kenworthy.

A comedy reading a parody on the Gettysburg Address, was given by Christine Mederos. Following the program, the students returned to their sixth period classes and electives, prior to dismissal for the Easter holiday. Small parties were held in some of the elective classes.

Monterey Heights School

It was "Ship Ahoy" last Wednesday, when the children of Mrs. Kennedy's third grade took a boat excursion around the famous San Diego Harbor. The students have been working on a unit featuring ships and boats in transportation.

The following mothers furnished transportation and accompanied the children: Mrs. Linden, Mrs. Courtney, Mrs. Tooze and Mrs. Barry.

Contract Let for Cafeteria at High School

The Harry Muns Construction Company of San Diego was awarded the contract for the construction of the Cafeteria Building to be erected at the Grossmont Union High School. The low bid was $106,000 with the other 10 bidders ranging up to $122,000. The 10,000 square foot Cafeteria Building will thus cost $10.60 per square foot which is below the State estimate for this type of construction. The bidding on the contract was very competitive.

The main dining hall will accommodate 450 at a time and will be available for community gatherings and dinners which cannot be accommodated in private facilities.

The addition of the Cafeteria to the Grossmont plant was considered vital to the health program. The growing student requires a warm-balanced meal for lunch.

This is the last unit in the building program at Grossmont until the high schools in El Cajon and La Mesa are completed except that some outdoor Physical Education facilities are needed and a district Administrative Office probably will be constructed on the Grossmont site after the high school in La Mesa is in operation.

Capt. Brandal in New Command

Captain Gus Brandal, 2475 McKnight St., who had been captain of the research boat, the E. W. Scripps, has been assigned to a larger boat, the Crest.

These two boats, along with the Harrison and the Paulina Ann, are used in research work by the Scripps School of Oceanography of the University of California located at La Jolla.

The E. W. Scripps takes students out on research trips, while the Crest is used by scientists connected with the University, making two-weeks' trips every month.

Captain Brandal, who was born in Norway, has been a sea man since he was 14 years of age.

Vista La Mesa PTA

Dave Barnes of the Child Guidance Bureau will speak to the Vista La Mesa P.T.A. at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday of next week in the school kindergarten room.

Hostesses will be the first grade mothers, Mrs. Richard Wrightson, Mrs. Merle Gruess, Mrs. Bradley Yale and Mrs. John Hart. An honorary life membership will be presented.

Keys are returned to owners from all over the world. One of the most unusual key losses and returns saw a Cincinnati grainery employee lose his set in a sack of oats. The keys were found when the sack was opened aboard a freighter in the English Channel enroute to Poland and they made their way back via the DAV.

Tags even brought back keys from the war zones.

For the motorists who wish extra Idento-Tags for extra sets of keys, the DAV has established a special order department which handles more than 100,000 requests each year.

The DAV Idento-Tag plant is owned and operated by the DAV in the interests of disabled veterans and employs disabled veterans in their manufacture.

In filing for the office of County Assessor on his thirty-second birthday, Childs stated that he had no desire or intention to conduct a campaign by criticizing his opponent.

"My campaign is a constructive one. If elected I shall convene a delegation of resident-representatives from each of the various inhabited regions of the county.

These persons must have great local knowledge and must be sent by their own community as community representatives. The group so formed will meet once a week, or once a month, or as often as their businesses will permit, and together will thresh out the relative values, with respect to each other, of the various regions of the County.

The result will be a master assessment plan in which no region or individual lot is assessed for more or for less than its proper value. From then on, any purely local increases in the value of properties can be quickly spotted and fairly treated, while an overall increase or reduction in values permissible or necessary because of a County budget change can be administered and applied quite fairly.

Red Cross Gives Help Year Round

Because the 1950 Red Cross campaign is lagging so badly in San Diego county, the local chapter is launching an intensive recruitment program to bring in additional volunteers to carry on its vital services. Mrs. Albert Ward heads a recruitment committee composed of charmen of the chapters.

One of these volunteers will be on duty for interviews daily, Monday through Friday, April 10-21, from 1 to 4 p. m. at the Chapter headquarters in Balboa Park. The Red Cross building is located on the Alameda, just north of the Zoo Cafe. No appointment is necessary, but those desiring further information are invited to call Franklin 8871 or to write Red Cross, Box 1028, San Diego 12.

All Red Cross volunteers are carefully trained before they begin their services to the community. That is one of the reasons why Red Cross workers are always so welcome in hospitals and agencies where they are assigned. They are asked to give at least one day's service each week, and it is necessary for them to buy their own uniforms when they have completed their training. The cotton indoor uniforms are, of course, not as expensive as the outdoor field uniform. An outdoor uniform is worn by the Motor Service drivers, but for other services the indoor one is sufficient.

Gray Ladies are needed for the convalescent hospitals only, at this time. They receive special training to help with the occupational therapy program at the Children's Convalescent Hospital, 850 South 36th Street.

Motor Service furnishes transportation in Red Cross cars for all needs. Any man or woman with a California driver's license is eligible. Volunteers serve one day a week, if possible.

Arts and Skills Service is a program of craft work carried on in the workshop at the Naval Hospital. Men or women with a basic knowledge of photography, wood carving, plastics, ceramics and lapidary work are needed.

Leather and copper work are taught those without special skills who wish to serve convalescent patients.

Staff Aide Service members assist the chapters and the Naval Hospital as typists, receptionists and other office workers. Men and women are eligible.

Nurse's Aide Service is open only to those already trained by Red Cross who want to re-activate their service. Volunteers will serve once or twice a month.

Canteen Service requires women to enroll and train to serve food in case of disaster or other emergency. A reserve group to be on call is needed.

Production and Supply Service offers opportunity for those with skill in sewing or knitting to

Are You Bound by a Promise Made Under Great Emotional Stress?

A sudden fire trapped a woman in the attic of her home, and firemen were unable to reach her. In the midst of the blaze, the woman's husband returned from his office. Frantically, he cried: "I'll pay $3,000 to anybody who brings out my wife—dead or alive!" A bystander rushed into the flaming house, fought his way upstairs, and carried the woman out. Unfortunately, she had already died from suffocation. Later the rescuer demanded the $3,000 he had been promised. The husband pleaded that he should not be bound by a promise under such circumstances, but the court ruled that he must indeed pay the full amount. The judge pointed out that the bystander had risked his own life to fulfill the husband's plea—and therefore was entitled to his reward.

Could You Prevent The City From Changing The Name Of Your Street?

For many years, a wealthy dowager lived in a large house on an exclusive residential street. One day the city notified her that, because of a rearrangement of traffic routes, the name and house numbers of that particular block would have to be changed. The dowager was outraged, and decided to fight the change. She battled all the way to the state supreme court, insisting that the city had no right to change her address without her permission. However, the court didn't see it that way and upheld the city's action. The judge said that, no matter how long a person has an address, it still never becomes his private property.

May an Automobile Be Classified As a "Deadly Weapon?"

A young woman was driving along the highway one day when a sedan passed her. Annoyed at this impertinence, she immediately speeded up, determined to regain the lead. As she was passing the sedan, she cut in sharply—side-swiping it neatly into a ditch! The other driver was injured, and the girl was arrested on a charge of "assault with a deadly weapon." At the trial, she protested that she may have been guilty of negligence—but nothing worse. However, the court found her guilty as charged. The judge said that handling a car in such a reckless manner is indeed an "assault with a deadly weapon."

May You Stop The Neighbor's Dog From Howling?

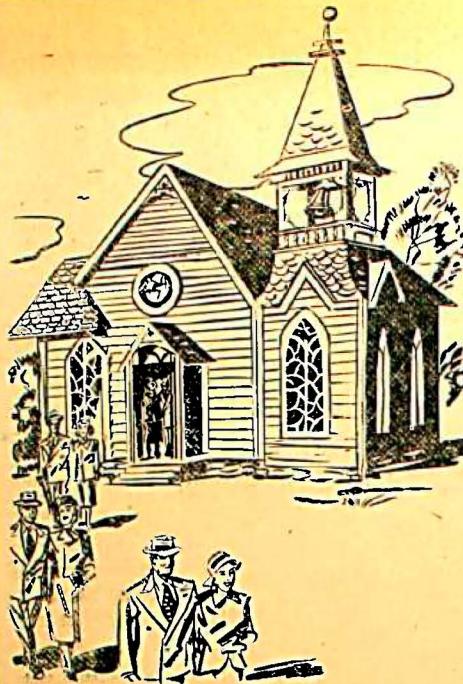

A doctor fitted up a room at the back of his home, and began using it as an office. All went well until a new family moved in next door—with a dog. Every morning the neighbor would go out for about two hours, leaving the dog locked in a bedroom. During that time, the animal would give vent to such a howling and yelping that the doctor could hardly examine his patients. At last he went to court for an injunction. The neighbors argued that there is nothing unlawful about the barking of a dog, but the court granted the doctor's request. The judge said a dog's noise-making is ordinarily permissible, but at least must be kept within reasonable bounds!

A woman wrote a magazine article maliciously—and inaccurately—attacking the character of George Washington. Acting on the protests of outraged citizens, the police arrested the writer on charges of defamation. At the trial, she argued that her attack couldn't do any harm—because Washington and his family were all dead anyway! But the court found the woman guilty as charged. The judge said that it was wrong to maliciously blacken the name of a person who still lived in the memories of his countrymen.

TOLD

If there is one enterprise on earth that the quitter should leave alone, it is advertising. Advertising does not jerk . . . it pulls. It pulls gently at first but the pull is steady. It increases day by day, year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power.—John Wanamaker.

It was John Wanamaker who once said he would never let the local newspaper go to press without his name in its advertising columns.

What to Seal in Cornerstone?

Gold Piece, Balloon, G-String

By BILLY ROSE

If anyone is going to lay a cornerstone in 1950, I would suggest he seal up the following items for the benefit of the folks in 2050.

1. A COPY of The Congressional Record. It will make dull reading, I grant you, but it will prove that our legislators could get up their hind legs and sound off on anything from the price of asparagus to the plight of the Zuni Indians. And what's happening in Europe or Asia is the shape of things to come, it will undoubtedly interest our descendants to know that there once was a time when a legally elected representative could shoot off his face without being shot an hour later.

2. A $20 GOLD PIECE. At the time we're going to 2050 a pound of butter may be worth more than a pound of printed money,

W.N.U. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS
CHAPTER I: Driving home, Todd after visiting Todd's nephew Duke, stops at a ranch. Callie, a army camp, Todd, McKinnon, Georgine, Wyeth, and her small daughter, Barby, made a tour to Valleyville, to pay a visit to some friends. On the way was some time that they found their goal to be a crumbling monastary. Once inside and after having made their home there, Georgine had a premonition that there was more to the place than met the eye.

CHAPTER II: Mrs. Peabody invited the three to stay that night—in fact, asked them to stay as a favor, saying that she was afraid to stay alone. Next morning at breakfast, Mrs. Peabody told them that Miss Adeline Tillotson was the woman that had connected her death with her husband, Gilbert, who was now in the army. Todd had been in touch with the Army, but he had not been able to get in touch with Miss Tillotson. White Georgine wanted to leave immediately. Mrs. Peabody asked Todd to hear her story and aid her to learn the truth about Adeline's death.

CHAPTER III:

Mrs. Peabody took a deep breath, and her gaze on Todd deepened. "Then Miss Tillotson died. You couldn't call it unexpected exactly, when she was eighty-two and had had one stroke already, but we all—missed her." Gilbert felt very badly. She was nearer to him than anyone in the family, and he'd been like a son to her, did business for her, that sort of thing. The very morning she died he'd been in to the county seat on an errand at the bank. He'd brought her something—I—he never said what, out of her safe-deposit box. I saw him for a few minutes at noon, and he—just mentioned it."

"He saw her in the morning, then?" Todd said, almost absently.

The pink flush burned again in Nella Peabody's cheeks. "Yes. He—as I remember, he said he might go in again that afternoon, for a minute. Miss Adeline had seemed preoccupied in the morning, and rather tired.

"I remember that afternoon. It was so lovely and hot, and the trees were all out in full leaf. People were worried about the situation in France, but somehow on a day like that you could tell yourself that it was far away on the other side of the world and could not touch you."

"It wasn't until about seven that I heard Miss Adeline was sinking. They'd got hold of Horace and Mary Helen, and Susie had called Dr. Crane, but he was out in the country attending to a difficult confinement, and he didn't get here until eight or so. She died just a few minutes after that."

"The doctor was present when she died. Well, that seems normal enough, so far," Todd said. He sounded casual as ever, but his attention had not wavered. It was almost, Georgine thought, as if he were listening more to the overtones of Mrs. Peabody's voice than to the words of her story. "What made you think there was anything wrong? Miss Tillotson hadn't by any chance, she hadn't been threatening to change her will?"

"Oh, no," Mrs. Peabody said quickly, seeming relieved. "Her will had been drawn up years before, and everyone knew what was in it. Most of it they could have guessed even if she hadn't told them, because it was traditional in the Tillotson family that the orchard and farm property should stay in the oldest generation. That part of her holdings went to the Judge, of course. And we'd—Gilbert and I had known for a long time that, Gilbert, was to have this house and all its contents. Mary Helen was to have the jewelry in the safe-deposit box, and there was some money for Horace—at least, there had been, but we all knew he'd persuaded her to invest in the drugstore for him. You might call it borrowing on his inheritance, I suppose. No, we all knew how she'd left her property. Nobody was disappointed. There wasn't any hurry, you can see that, can't you?"

"None at all!" said Todd, as if to himself.

Mrs. Peabody laid down the napkin carefully. Her voice was not quite steady as she replied. "If anyone had wanted his inheritance badly, it would have been Gilbert. It meant that he and I could be married at last, that we'd be sure of a roof over our heads, and furniture, and all the things we'd been too poor to buy before. He was just getting out of debt for a—a family illness, and all I had was what I earned. And I can vouch for it, Mr. McKinnon, I can promise you faithfully that we'd never have been in that much of a hurry, never."

"Of course not," said Todd. His deep-set eyes were still intent on her face. "But, d'you know, I still don't see why there should have been any suspicion. How did they think the old lady had died?"

"At first, everyone simply thought it was another stroke," Nella said softly.

for my advice, Mrs. Peabody, and I don't often volunteer it, but in your place I'd be tempted to track down those rumors and make people give me some proof of their suspicions—or else eat their words."

"Oh, I thought of that," the older woman said weakly. "I tried it. And do you know why I didn't get anywhere?" She turned and faced them, with a semblance of composure. "Because they're fond of me; because they're kind. Tell them it would be kinder to talk the thing out, and they simply say, 'What thing? What is there to talk out? What are you going to do then, when all you get is silence?'"

Georgine excused herself and went toward the front of the house. For the past half hour she had been hearing, with that extra ear bestowed on mothers, the sound of Barby's voice and footsteps. The child had been talking to someone else; but in the last few minutes both voices had died away.

It was all right, though, she saw, as soon as she reached the front door. Barby and her companion had gone across the street and were surveying the site of the house that had burned. The other child, a somewhat older girl, seemed to wear a proprietary air, as if the ruin-showing concession belonged to her.

Barby saw her coming, and at once shut her eyes and screwed up her face, in her usual effort to remember about introductions.

The effort ended in triumph. "Mother," said Barby with terrific formality, "I want you to know my friend Virdette Bacon, Listen! Mamma, she used to live here! She lived right in this house that burned down, lookit, there's still some of the cellar left."

"Well, don't fall into it," said Georgine automatically. "How do you do, Virdette. Did you live here long?"

Miss Bacon took her time about answering. She was a stout child of eleven or twelve, with blond hair done up in a multitude of curlers, and a look of great competence. Her right hand constantly manipulated a yo-yo, but she did not once look at its bewildering gyrations; it was very impressive.

"Yes'm," she said finally. "I was born here, and I lived here right along until the place burned down last year."

"Here's Teddy," Barby screamed excitedly. "He and Mama are going to get married, Virdette. Then he'll be my stepfather. He can play the mouth-organ better anybody you ever heard."

Virdette acceded him, after this recommendation, far more interest than she had given Georgine. Barby displayed her family's and her acquaintances' talents with scrupulous fairness. Say little, Teddie, she commanded.

"Lile bole," said Todd obligingly.

"See? He can't say those t's at all. Now tell her why you aren't in the army."

"Barby!" said Georgine sharply.

"I mean one of the funny ones. Mamma, he's told me about twenty times, and it's never the same. Why aren't you, Tody?"

She turned to give him a surprised look. "But—we live here," she said.

Georgine had sat looking at her with pity, with wonder and a sort of sympathetic anger. Now she got to her feet, stretching after the long period of concentration. "I must go and check up on Barby," she remarked. "You haven't asked me."

Virdette looked at him for a moment, and then giggled wildly.

"See?" Barby remarked proudly. "I told you he was funny. Now, Virdette, you show us where everything was in your house, just like you were telling me."

"This here," said Virdette, shooting the yo-yo in a graceful curve toward the north, "was our front parlor, with the dinin'-room right in back, and the kitchen back o' that. Here, where we're standing, was the parlor that we hardly ever used. The piano was in here, though, and boy, did I see plenty of this ole room! Was I glad when the house burned down. It burned all my good clothes, but it got the piano, too, and I didn't have to practice any more."

"Did they keep you at it?" Todd asked gravely, seating himself beside Georgine on the cement of the ruined foundation.

"They say, they were going to make one of these child prodigies out of me, see, because I remember things. The music teacher at school, she got all excited when she found out I could play a piece once and then not forget it, so she told Mom I ought to have special training."

"But when your piano burned you had to give up the idea?" Georgine inquired.

"No, it was some before that. They decided I was too old. I was nine then, so I couldn't ever be a real prodigy."

Barby felt this to be very unprofitable. "Listen, Virdette, show me where the things were in the kitchen. Was that chimney for a fireplace, Virdette, or the kitchen stove? What was out back there?"

"Aw, just a garden. There's some hyacinths and narcissus and stuff in bloom right now."

"Let's go see," Barby said, dragging her off.

"Get ready to come in pretty soon, darling," Georgine called after her. "And if you tear your new coat, or get it dirty, something very unpleasant will happen. That clear?"

"Honest I'll be careful, Mama," said Barby, recognizing the voice that meant business.

"Keep an eye on them, will you, Todd? I want to help Mrs. Peabody clear up, and then we really must be getting away."

"Wait a minute," Todd said lightly. "She wants to be alone for a while, she told me; and I'd like to talk something over with you."

Georgine resumed her perch. "What'll you bet I know it already?" she said, grinning at him. "You want to stay up here and scrape up some grit for the null."

"Not far off," said Todd imperatively.

"Well, why not? Barby and I can go home on the bus; that suitcase isn't a bit heavy."

"I don't want you to do that."

"No," Todd said mildly. "I don't want to stay without you."

She looked round at him quickly. "Will you stay, Georgine, you and Barby? I know what I've been thinking! I wondered if we hadn't made a mistake, putting off our marriage even this long."

"But, Todd, we had to. There had to be a few weeks to get Barby used to the idea of a stepmother, and then you were called north to be executor for your brother's estate, and since you've been back—do I need to tell you about the housing situation?"

"That's it, Mrs. Peabody and her

Gilbert waited all those years for a roof over their heads, and missed far too much of each other. Maybe we've been hile too particular about finding the right house. Maybe we're foolish not to be married right away, as soon as they'll issue the license; three days isn't it? We can take a chance on finding somewhere to live, at worst we could all squeeze into my apartment or your cottage—if we wanted to badly enough."

Nixon Making Strong Bid for Senatorial Toga

In a plea for world peace on the anniversary of this country's entrance into World War I, Congressman Richard Nixon delivered a pre-Easter message urging the American People to "pray for the liberation of the enslaved peoples behind the Iron Curtain."

"In this Easter season, the voice of all America should ring throughout the world a clarion clear message of prayerful hope and good will to the millions of oppressed people under Soviet domination."

Speaking at Hanford, in Kings County today, Nixon, candidate for the United States Senate, declared that there is "no easy way to peace, despite our wishful thinking."

Liberty and freedom, he said, "must be vigilantly defended. Because we are gravely concerned about the threat to the peace and security of the world posed by the Soviet Union, we must strengthen our nation economically and militarily," Nixon declared.

The senatorial candidate's Hanford speech climaxed a week's barnstorming tour of Kern, Tulare and Kings County, marking the first lap of his scheduled two-months' extensive campaign throughout the state's 58 counties. He spoke to men in the oil fields, on the farms, in the barbershops and at street corners, carrying out his campaign promise to "tell the people where I stand on every vital issue, and to learn their views, their problems and their needs."

In two fighting speeches at Bakersfield and at Porterville, Congressman Nixon came out 'unalterably opposed to the 160-acre limitation in the Central Valley, citing the "varying soil conditions and productivity as two principal reasons why the limitation is both impractical and unworkable."

He charged that "Bureau of Reclamation politicians are seeking to socialize the water supply in the Central Valley," and called upon the President "to quit trying to use the Valley as a guinea pig for unrealistic, socialistic planning."

The 160-acre limitation is a phony issue," Nixon said, "which has been raised for political purposes only, in an attempt to divide the people of the Valley through a campaign of hatred and misrepresentation."

Nixon said that the "orderly development and completion of the Central Valley project is being substantially obstructed by a few, power-hungry dictators in the Reclamation Bureau."

As matters stand, when you attempt to deal with your government, you will find 34 agencies engaged in obtaining land, 10 in Federal construction work, 9 in credit and finance and 50 in gathering statistics. A rancher desiring to pasture his livestock on public lands must obtain separate permits, each containing different terms and conditions, from both the Department of Interior and the Department of Agriculture.

The Army Engineers and the Reclamation Bureau cost the taxpayers untold millions of dollars through duplication of effort on water resources development. As an instance of this wasteful duplication, the Hungry Horse Project in Montana was estimated to cost $3,300,000. The actual cost was $33,500,000.

In New Orleans, there are 5 Federal hospitals operated separately by different branches of the government. Their joint capacity is 1,620 beds. When surveyed, they had a total of 913 patients.

If you want this waste and inefficiency stopped, write your Congressman. Write the Citizens Committee for Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government, 1421 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia 2, Pennsylvania, for further information. Get your neighbors to work with you in this crusade.

Sacramento Report

By RALPH R. CLOYED
Assemblyman

As a means toward meeting mounting costs of welfare programs the County Supervisors Association is backing a bill in the Legislature to permit counties to levy a sales tax.

At the present time the only method available to the counties for meeting these expanding projects is to load an additional financial burden on the already overtaxed property owners. If the counties are to meet the bills of programs already facing them, it is estimated that at least a levy of 30 cents on every $100 of assessed valuation will have to be made.

Latest statistics show that if all 58 counties imposed a one-half one percent sales tax it would raise an estimated total of $56,000,000.

In addition to the tax load already being faced by the counties, two bills that passed the Assembly last week, if they gain approval of the Senate and the Governor, would cost an additional estimated $6,125,000.

One would return to the pension rolls those 63 and 64 year olds who were cut off when the voters approved Proposition No.

last November. Proposition No. 2 became effective March 1st and it is estimated if this bill is successful it will cost the State $10,000,000 and the counties $1,250,000.

The second bill already passed by the Assembly would eliminate the relative responsibility clause in California's pension law. The clause requires that financially able persons contribute to the support of their pensioned parents. This bill would cost the counties another $5,000,000.

However, neither bill carried a program for financing the added expense and Governor Warren is on record as opposed to any measures proposing expenditures unless they carry proposals for financing themselves. Unless he changes his mind the Legislature will have to provide for additional taxes to finance these bills or the Governor will veto them.

Another issue that is expected to generate heated controversy on the floor of the Assembly is a resolution that would rescind the action of last year's Legislature in approving United States participation in a world Federal government. The rescinding resolution squeezed through the Senate last week after hours of hot debate.

One issue that deserves support is the proposed three cent per pack tax on cigarettes to finance increased state aid to public schools.

The rural areas of San Diego county, particularly would benefit from this measure. The Lemon Grove School District is a good example of why we need this kind of legislation. Before the war this district had a total of about 250 pupils. Since that time its school population has soared to over 1,500.

Lemon Grove is only typical of the conditions existing in rural school districts throughout San Diego County.

You might just as well write down this name and address for sooner or later you are going to need something repaired or fixed in a hurry and start looking for such a shop!

Drew's Fix-It Shop at 3446 Main St., is the mecca for all who are in trouble. Al Drew can fix anything from electric appliances to a broken shoe string.

Al was one of those children unfortunate enough to have polio when no one knew what to do for the patient. However, Al grew up with a stout heart and a determination to make his own way.

He has never been able to walk without the aid of crutches, but he has overcome the handicap. He has a charming, loyal wife and two lovely children.

Always had a knack for fixing things so he tried to do jobs a little better than any one else. He was a tool maker for 19 years, a gunsmith and expert welder.

Al loves children so naturally they like to hang around his shop.

He fixes their bicycles and shows them how to do their own repair jobs.

APPRECIATION

Mrs. G. R. Graham,
Associate Editor
Lemon Grove Review
Dear Mrs. Graham:

Many comments have come in to this office on the outstanding publicity given to the 1950 Red Cross campaign. None of that splendid coverage could have been obtained without your generous cooperation, and I want to thank you and all who helped in this year's appeal.

Since Red Cross receives its entire support from voluntary contributions, it is only right that the public be kept informed about our year-round activities. As your San Diego Chapter carries on its program of service to this community your continuing assistance will be vitally important to its success. Many thanks for everything!

Sincerely,

Your Money Aids Cancer Research

Although cancer death rates rise rapidly with age—and 90 percent of the cases are in those over 40—cancer strikes children. Among the 200,000 deaths from cancer last year, nearly 3000 were in those under 15. Leukemia, a cancer disease of the blood and blood-forming organs, accounts for nearly one-half of these deaths.

But cancer's effect on children is much broader than these figures indicate. Statisticians of the American Cancer Society point out that more than 60,000 children under 18 in the United States lose a parent each year to cancer.

About 500 children are completely orphaned by cancer yearly—losing both father and mother to cancer. There are in this country today 290,000 children who have lost their father to cancer, and about 185,000 who have lost their mother to cancer.

How many orphans will cancer make in the future? That depends in large measure on scientific progress in finding new means of controlling the disease and upon the success of the education program which can help save 67,000 lives a year through early detection and prompt treatment. Your money given to the 1950 Cancer Crusade will support the research, service and education programs of the American Cancer Society. Strike back: Give to Conquer Cancer.
